Francisco office of Munger, Tolles & Olson in the fall of 2002 after my clerkship ends."

Gene Levoff reports that he is still in O'Melveny's Menlo Park office. He has thus far been unsuccessful in lobbying for an Istanbul office and has turned his attention to solving the more immediate problem of the lack of Good Earth tea in the break room. Gene, if you still don't make enough bones to buy the afternoon tea you want, it may be time to change your cravings. I've seen even LRAP friends with enough change for a box of tea after their Broncos and beer.

A few of us in Southern California (Lara Cooper, Christine Pajak, me) got to be in Los Angeles to see the L.A. criminal courts building dedicated in the name of Clara Shortridge Foltz, who broke the legal barriers that once restricted the California practice of law to white males. Two impressive Stanford Law women, Justice Sandra Day O'Connor '52 and Barbara Babcock (Clara's biographer), both spoke at the dedication. [See story, p. 13]. On the work front, I'm enjoying a job that gives me nice doses of court time, and I think I'm learning to bluff as well as the next lawyer. I've been lucky to see Kristen Jaconi and Alfred Murata around town. As a last note, I encourage you to check out the murals Eugene's group has created. I was blown away when I saw them and read about the depictions. Take care, and thanks for keeping in touch.

From the editor's in-box: Greg Bellomy was named an associate at Fish & Neave in Palo Alto in December.

ADVANCED DEGREES

Maurizio Delfino, JSD '83, still teaching part time at the University of Rome's La Sapienza Law School, recently set up a law firm with offices in Milan and Rome, specializing in private equity, M&A, and capital markets work. He did this jointly with a New York law firm; thus, it is called Studio Legale Delfino e Associati-Willkie Farr & Gallagher. Maurizio and his wife have two children, Benedetta, 4, and Federico, 1.

Quince Hopkins, JSM '98, has been an assistant professor of law at Washington and Lee University School of Law since the fall of 2000.

Frances Foster, JSD '87, will be a visiting professor of law at the University of Michigan Law School during the fall 2002 semester. She will teach Chinese law and trusts and estates. Tobias Bosch, JSM '99, reports that he finished his German doctoral thesis last summer and now proudly sports the title Dr.

Kevin Culhane, JSM '77, is a partner in the Sacramento law firm of Hansen, Boyd, Culhane & Watson, LLP, which was formed in 1978 as a successor to Matsui & Hansen when Matsui was elected to Congress. Kevin leads the professional liability practice group, which deals with all aspects of legal practice, or the "law of lawyering." This year he was recognized by the law faculty of the University of the Pacific, McGeorge School of Law, for 25 years of teaching law there. During that time he served as a professor, visiting professor, and adjunct professor of law. Kevin and his wife, Jeanne, are celebrating their 29th wedding anniversary this year; they have two children and one grandchild.

Tarig Anani, JSM '94, general counsel of SAP

Arabia, received the Best ERP Solution Award from former U.S. vice president Al Gore at the Burj Al-Arab Hotel in Dubai in January 2001. It was the second year in a row that SAP Arabia has won this award.

After graduation, Roberto Santivanez-Seminario, JSM '01, joined the Latin American finance group at Mayer, Brown & Platt in New York, where he primarily is doing project finance, securitization, and other forms of structured finance with Latin America, and, most recently, privatization. His SPILS master's thesis was recently published in a bilingual (English/Spanish) edition and debuted in Lima in November 2001 to a warm reception; the book's title is Electricity Deregulation and Privatization in Peru: A Proposal to Revitalize the Reform.

Michinobu Kishi, JSM '97, returned to Tokyo in June after a two-year assignment in New York and is currently heading the legal group in the operations department at the Bank of Japan.
